

Young actors take Fringe by storm

YOUNG Cobham thespians took the Edinburgh Fringe Festival by storm, earning rave reviews for their six performances.

Thirteen Feltonfleet School pupils performed Lord of the Flies at last month's festival — the third the school has attended and the third sell-out.

The young actors and actresses, aged between 12 and 13, performed their critically acclaimed show to packed houses and standing ovations.

Show director and head of pastoral care at Feltonfleet, Alasdair Richardson congratulated the cast members for their "enthusiasm, dedication and professionalism".

"To perform at the world's biggest arts festival and to be judged as outstanding when your peers are world-famous professional artists is quite an achievement," he said.

"We're all very proud of our young actors and actresses."

Youngsters from Feltonfleet raised the roof with their production of Lord of the Flies.